

List of Contributors

Antonia Anstatt completed her Bachelor of Arts in History and Management at the Ruhr-University Bochum in Germany, spending a semester each at the Tongji-University Shanghai and the University of Seville. She is now a first-year MPhil student at Oxford, studying Medieval History at Merton College. She is particularly interested in Church History and the history of saints.

James McKinney completed his MSt in Medieval History at St. Hilda's College in 2019, and he received his BA in History from Whitman College the year prior. He is fascinated by the meeting-grounds of identity, image, and authority, and has written on topics ranging from the propaganda of the Ptolemaic dynasty to the familial representations of women in the late Anglo-Saxon period. Beyond historical research, his interests include public outreach, ethical education, astronomy, and fencing.

Ed Ford graduated in 2019 with a First Class degree in Philosophy, Politics and Economics from St Peter's College. He now works for Frank Field, the Birkenhead Social Justice Party Prospective Parliamentary Candidate for Birkenhead. His research interests include the intellectual history of the British left, British foreign and colonial policy, and domestic perspectives on international politics.

Henry Brown graduated from King's College London with a BA in War Studies in 2017. He is currently reading for an MSt in the History of War at the University of Oxford under the supervision of Professor Tom Buchanan. He was a co-contributor to Leicester's Journey to Justice exhibition on the local history of social activism, providing research on the city's International Brigades volunteers. A paper relaying the findings of this joint-research project is shortly to be published in the journal of the Leicestershire Archaeological and Historical Society. His research interests include early-modern and modern examples of "military culture", with a more recent focus on the formation of military ideals during the Spanish Civil War.

Surajkumar Thube is a first year DPhil student at the Faculty of History, University of Oxford. His broad research outline primarily deals with the Origins of Hindu Nationalism in Western India, with a focus on late 19th – early 20th century. His other areas of interests also include Intellectual History of Modern India, Western Political Thought and Contemporary South Asian Politics.

Freja Stamper completed her undergraduate degree in Latin and Medieval History at the University of St Andrews. She is currently reading for an MSt in Medieval History at Corpus Christi College, Oxford. Her main research interests are in Late Antiquity; especially the legislation and ecclesiastical policies of Emperor Justinian I.

Ella Ditri recently completed her undergraduate degree in History at St Peter's College, Oxford, and is now undertaking her Master's degree in Medieval History at Hertford College, Oxford. Her main historical interests are women and gender in eleventh and twelfth century England, reflecting on them through the lens of governmental records. She enjoys attending events run by Oxford's Centre for Gender, Identity and Subjectivity, UN Women and musical theatre.